

March 31 SABA Seminar Only a Short Time Away

9:30 am- 5 pm Saturday March 31, 2012, in the Huxley Theater in the NY State Museum, within the Cultural Education Center. 222 Madison Ave., Albany NY

New location! Parking is much closer, and bigger. No stairs involved between parking and the room!

We're very pleased that the walk from parking to the room is only half the distance that it was at the University. The Museum will be open during the day if you want to wander. Museum entry is free, as is parking.

Speakers : Maryann Frazier of Penn State University and Randy Oliver of Scientific Beekeeping will enlighten us with 6 consecutive presentations.

Vendors: Betterbee, Brushy Mountain Bee Farm and Dadant will have booths. Check with them for pre-orders.

Raffles : As usual, a fundraiser will be held with many many beekeeping prizes donated by vendors and friends.

Lunch break: SABA has arranged a lunch this year, so there won't be any need to dash out to drive and find a restaurant. The new seminar venue is in downtown Albany, and there are only a few places close by for lunch.

Cost: If pre-registered by March 24:

$38 for SABA member. Lunch is included in the fee.

$43 for non-SABA member. Lunch is included in the fee.

Walk-ins on seminar day (seminar only, no SABA lunch):

$35 for non-SABA member

$30 for SABA member

* Remember, if we don't receive your registration by March 24, you will not get the SABA lunch. ****

To join SABA, see website www.adirondackbees.org .

All students who have ever applied for a SABA youth award can get in the seminar for free, but must register for the seminar and pay by March 24 for the lunch if you join us for the SABA lunch ($14).

Dinner with speakers : Would you like to get together with the speakers and a few dozen beekeepers for dinner? We'll be eating out Friday 3/30, again at the The Italian-American Community Center (now The Treviso). Dinner cost is $32 per person. We will each order from a select menu. Alcoholic drinks are to be paid for by the individual. The total dinner bill will be split equally between diners. Any excess money will be returned. To determine possible refund, any excess will be equally divided by the number of diners.)
